Further improvement of the grounds was left discretionary with the board of directors. Mr. Galt also made a statement showing the cause of the action of the Wheatley Bros. against the association, saying that there was a difference of several theusand dollars in the estimates submitted by the Wheatley Bros. for lumber furnished the Fair association and in those made by the architect of the association. One of the Wheatley Bros. was present and said that their estimate was correct and that they had the bills to bear him out. The meeting was then adjourned. then adjourned.

AMUSEMENTS.

Ford's Opera-House-"Octoroon." Diou Bouclesult's realistic play of Southern life, the "Octoroon," was presented last night at the Opera House by the Gotthold Dramatic Combination to an appreciative audience. The story of the play is well known and the characters of the play are well taken. Miss Florence Elmore, who takes the part of Zee, is a charming brunette with their that reaches below her waist, and is a very pleasing actress; Mr. J. N. Gotthold as Salem Scudder, the goodhearted overseer who has a good word and a strong arm to protect overy one in need of a friend, has made this character a specialty and proves himself a finished actor; Mr. Frank Losee as Jacob McClockey, and Mr. R. L. Stockwell as Unice Pete, and the rest of the company assist in making the play very interesting and picasing. The Old Dominion Jubilee Singers (colored), who accompany this combination, comprising seven Diou Boucleault's realistic play of Southern Old Dominion Jubiles Singers (colored), who accompany this combination, comprising seven voices—four male and three female—rendered plantation songs and choruses with a degree of excellence not often attained by such organizations. They were repeatedly recalled by the audience, who seemed completely carried away with their delightful music. The "Octoroon" will be repeated every evening this week and Wednesday and Saturday matinees. Italian Opera-"I Puritani."

If the rendition of Bellini's great work, which last night inaugurated the brief operatic season at the National Theatre, can be taken as a fair sample of the representations that are to follow, then, indeed, we may once again score a success for genuine grand opera. The performance went smoothly from beginning to end, and if there was any special drawback to the cujoyment of the even-ning, it lay in the fact that the prompter was too audible, and that his voice interfered unpleasantly with the singers. The cast had been carefully so-lected, and almost every one of the principal artists was quite equal to the part assigned.
M'lle La Blanche (Blanche Davenport) as
Eleira insinuated herself at once into the good will of the antience. The young lady is more than good-looking, has a fine stage presence and possesses considerable dramatic talent, which found full expression in her skillfu which found full expression in her skillful representation of the hapless girl who becomes demented at the supposed faithlessness of her betrothed. M'lie La Blanche's voice, though not strong nor of very great compass, is very pure and liquid, and she uses it with consummate skill. Son veryin vezzon and Oh, vieni al temple she sang with such deficate expression and artistic fluish as to earn the hearty plaudics of the andionee. Sympt the hearty plaudits of the audione. Signer Lazzarini gave us a very good Artaro. He is a very agreeable tenore di paula, whose voice is especially clear and foreible in the upper registers, and he sings with an intelligent appreciation, which is quite rare in artists of his class. His tradition of the artest of his class. His rendition of A te, e cara, amore talora was one of the gens of the evening. The honors of the evening were unquestion. and Mons. Castelmary as Giorgio. The former has a splendid baritone voice; the latter is a basso profunds of the very best calibre. The famous duet, Sonori la tromba, at the end of the second act, fairly electrified the audistreets on Sunday, except newspapers, and newspapers after 10 a.m., is prohibited under a ponalty of $40.

Lincoln Hall. The testimonial to Mrs. Julia Daniels and Mr. L. P. Seibold, which takes place at Lincoln Hall to-night, deserves to be well remembered by all lovers of music. The talent secured embraces the most prominent vocalists, and the programme is exceptionally fine. Both the beneficiaries have freely rendered their services whenever called upon, and the various temperance organizations should be liberally represented. The benefit should certainly be a substantial one, and we trust that the house will be crowded.

Theatre Comique. A first-class variety show was presented at the Comique last evening to one of the largest audiences ever gathered within its walls. The Daytous, Tommie and Anale, and Quilter and Goldrich are old favorites here, and their appearance was the signal for a storm of ap-plause. The remainder of the bill is equally as good, and all will appear at the matines this afternoon.

GEORGETOWN NEWS.
